MERCEDES BRYCE MORGAN

With projects ranging from music videos viewed by millions, to interactive brand content, to feature films, Mercedes Bryce Morgan is always trying to push the boundaries of narrative. She is a queer, Latina filmmaker based in Los Angeles, where she received a BA in Film and Television Production from the USC School of Cinematic Arts. Mercedes has worked with celebrities such as Idina Menzel, Toderick Hall, and most notably, Marshmello, receiving a VMA nomination in 2019 for her video "Happier." She directed the series "Chatterbox and Virtual Morality," in which she expertly weaved in motion-controlled robotics and coding. Mercedes has created commercials for brands such as Walmart, Clorox, Unilever/Degree, Disney, Solo, Amazon, Red Bull, Apple Music, Beats, Google, and Fujifilm.
